Publishers Directory

1984-85

... A Guide to More Than 9,000 New and Established, Commercial and Nonprofit, Private Alternative, Corporate and Association, Government and Institution Publishing Programs and Their Distributors; Includes Producers of Books, Classroom Materials, Reports, and Databases.

Fifth Edition. Edited by Linda S. Hubbard. (Formerly published as Book Publishers Directory.) 1,729 pages in 2 vols. Publishers, Subject, and Geographic Indexes. Published by Gale Research Co., 1984. ISSN 0742-0501. L.C. No. 82-640252. ISBN 0-8103-0412-0. $200.00/set.

Dealing with a distinctive and growing area of publishing that is of increasing importance to librarians, researchers, booksellers, and others, Gale's Publishers Directory (formerly Book Publishers Directory) has gained rapid acceptance. The revised and expanded fifth edition provides authoritative information on some 9,300 presses in the United States and Canada that are not listed in Literary Market Place, an increase of 2,000 over the previous edition.

The publishing organizations described in the directory represent a broad spectrum, including: Small presses in the literary sense . . . Groups promoting special interests . . . Museums and societies in the arts and sciences . . . Divisions within universities that issue special publications . . . Religious institutions . . . Corporations that produce important publications in their areas of specialization . . . Government agencies . . . and more. Also covered in the new edition are producers of books, classroom materials, reports, and databases. A separate section is devoted to small press distribution. Typical entries in this new section provide complete contact information, year founded, principal officers, regional offices, a brief description, subject specialties, terms to publishers, special services, discount and returns policies, and more.

All information in Gale's Publishers Directory is obtained by mailing questionnaires to the publishers. Entries provide the most recent address, telephone number, date founded, ISBN prefix, and CIP (Cataloging in Publication) information in easy-to-read headnotes. The body of a typical entry includes the publishing house's principal personnel, a description of the aims of the organization, subjects covered in the firm's publications, discount and returns policy, and a list of representative titles.

Three indexes aid in retrieving specific information from any of the entries. The Publishers Index puts into one alphabetic sequence the names of the presses, both first and last names, and includes references to all publishers listed in Literary Market Place. The Subject Index gives the full names of presses under the 275 subjects that have been indicated by the publishers, or which were apparent from the titles of their publications. Finally, the Geographic Index serves as a source of addresses for area mailings and for locating publishers of local interest.
